Are you looking to leave your career as yacht crew? Would you rather be earning great cash while working on a beach or in Thailand or a cafe in Paris? Then check out our tips, where we will show you how to become a digital nomad!

1. Pick the Right Freelancing Job

Ten years ago, it was incredibly difficult to become a digital nomad as only a select few jobs were remote and many clients weren't comfortable doing business 100% over the internet. However, things have completely changed as the world has digitised, and you now can earn money through all kinds of methods such as full-time remote roles, freelance work, and even taking surveys or even playing games!

To ensure you can earn enough money to support your digital nomad lifestyle, here are some great digital nomad jobs you can pursue:

- Software development
- Copywriting
- Digital marketing
- English teaching
- Accounting and bookkeeping

To find digital jobs, you can either apply to fully remote positions or become a freelancer and use platforms such as Upwork or Fiverr to find clients. Don't worry if you lack experience. If you take some online courses and offer low prices, you can quickly build up a portfolio and go after higher-paying clients.

2. Get Your Finances in Check

Before you decide to become a full-time digital nomad, you need to have a solid amount of savings. At the beginning of your digital nomad journey, you may struggle to find enough work, and you will be hit with unexpected expenses as you get used to your new location. That is why we recommend you save up at least 6 months of living costs before quitting all of your other jobs and traveling around the world. Six months of savings will provide a nice cushion and allow you to start your digital nomad life without feeling the pressure of looming expenses.

To ensure you have saved up enough cash, you need to create a digital nomad budget. This budget will vary wildly based on the location you choose to relocate to. For example, in many parts of SouthEast Asia, you can live a very comfortable life on $1000 per month, while in places in Western Europe, you may need 3 times that amount. When coming up with a budget, you should include the basics such as rent, food, health care, insurance. You will very likely underestimate your costs, so expect your true budget to be 20% higher than your estimate.

3. Choose Your New Home

Being yacht crew, you've more than likely travelled to different places all over the world, so where do you head to first? The most popular digital nomad countries tend to be affordable countries with great weather, are safe, a high percentage of the population speak English, and have Western-style amenities. Based on these criteria, it becomes obvious why so many digital nomads choose places like Thailand. Other popular choices include:

- Hungary
- Sri Lanka
- Croatia
- Mexico
- Malaysia
- Bali

As you become an expert digital nomad guide, you can start to explore off the beaten path, but for your first destination, it is best to choose a popular destination that already has everything you need.

4. How do you create a Remote working Plan as yacht crew?

While the idea of aimlessly drifting across the world sounds good, this lifestyle can get old quickly. Coming up with a specific plan is one of the most popular digital nomad essentials. Important things to include on your digital nomad plan include:

- Income goals – Yacht crew tend to have more money saved than an individual in a 9-5 job, but If you don't have a plan you will be stuck earning less, and many countries will start to seem unaffordable for you to visit.
 - Daily to-do list – Just because you're a digital nomad doesn't mean you can just sit on the beach all day and still function!
 - Sights you want to see – If you don't plan, you may end up just sitting all day working in your apartment, which you could have done at home, not exactly digital nomad heaven!
 - Skills you want to develop – Keep developing as a person and write things you want to achieve, don't become a stagnant digital nomad.

Conclusion

Now you know exactly how to kickstart your digital nomad life, it is time to create your plan and get started on your incredible new journey. There is no reason why you can't earn amazing money online and live anywhere in the world! So what are your favorite digital nomad destinations?
